

No agreement yet on Cedar Street sewer

A little progress was made on July 25th toward the construction of a sewer main on Cedar Street in Wilmington. Very little.

Emile Hamway, of the firm of Fay, Spofford and Thorndike was instructed by the water and sewer commissioners to proceed with the designing of a sewer main, to go into Cedar Street. If ever it is constructed that sewer main will service the housing for the elderly along Deming Way. It may also service additional housing for the elderly.

Part of the construction, costs would be paid by the State Executive Office of Community Development (EOCD). The rest of the construction costs would have to come from town funds, or from some source of private funds.

There is a strong possibility that the sewer might serve homes along Cedar Street. There is also a possibility that the sewer might service new housing in back of the Roberts Estate, on Burlington Avenue.

The Roberts Estate proposal is controversial, but it carries the possibility of paying for all the costs of the sewer.

The Cedar Street area, if served by the sewer, would probably mean the assessment of Betterment Costs - a means of sharing costs by requiring payments from abutting land owners. There are Cedar Street land owners who object to such betterments.

Some selectmen have, or so it seems, proposed that the town appropriate $75,000 for the construction. That would be added to the EOCD funds, and the abutters, presumably, would pay no betterments.

To that the water and sewer commissioners object unanimously. No sewer has been laid along a public street using town funds in Wilmington, without the payment of betterments. To try to change the system now, the commissioners say, is to ask that every land owner who has paid betterments join in a law suit against them, asking for the repayment of such funds.

The selectmen can do that, if they wish, was one thought expressed on July 25, by a member of the board of water and sewer commissioners, but they'll have no help from us.

So the sewer and water commissioners will make a plan for a sewer to go along Cedar Street.

And that is as far as they will go.

Hard ground to break

Heavy rain on Friday forced the groundbreaking ceremony for renovations to Wilmington High School indoors. Taking part in the ceremony were, from left: Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski, Dr. Robert Soper, Edward Kaminski, State Rep. Jim Miceli, Permanent Building Committee Chairman Diane Allan, Bernie LaVita, Robert DiPalma, Marvin Weiner, School Committee Chairman Anthony Accardi and Superintendent of Schools Robert Horan.

Sunshine on a rainy day

by Arlene Surprenant

Even the last gasp of Hurricane Bob failed to dampen the spirits of the more than 50 officials and residents gathered to officially break ground for the high school renovation last Friday afternoon.

Shortly after noon, Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski welcomed those who had come to witness "this noteworthy day." Due to the inclement weather, the ceremony took place, not outdoors as planned, but in the high school cafeteria.

"Since much of the job will take place inside," he said, "it's appropriate we're meeting in a part of the building which is going to see a dramatic change in the next 16 months."

Stapczynski praised those who have "dedicated a lot of hours and self-sacrifice" to the project, and foresaw "more blood, sweat, and tears" ahead during the 16 month construction phase.

School committee chairman Tony Accardi told those present he will make a motion to dedicate the new school library to the memory of committee member John Brooks, who passed away July 22. Brooks had acted as the board's liaison with the permanent building committee (PBC).

Many present took the opportunity to say a few words.

A beaming Diane Allan, PBC chairman, said, "I hope you are as happy as I am" and added that, hopefully, "this will be a facility which will provide education for the next 20 years."

Lorna Stockbridge, head of the Renovation Task Force, seemed to speak for all. "It's raining outside," she said with a smile, "but I see a lot of sunshine inside."

Ed Sciaba promised that the newly renovated building will be "top quality." He assured guests that "I think it (the construction phase) can be achieved without any problems at all." Sciaba heads the construction firm chosen to work on the final phase of the project.

And Joseph Linehan, a member of the Class of 1988, was sure the schools' new look "will create pride in the school."

Local dignitaries and guests who were recognized and partook of an elaborate buffet following the ceremony included representatives from the Wilmington School Committee, Renovation Task Force, Water and Sewer Commission, Planning Board, Board of Health, Council on Aging and the Handicapped Commission.

Also present were past and present members of the PBC, State Rep. Jim Miceli, representatives from the high school administration, Sciaba Construction Corporation, Library Director Philip Meriman, Town Clerk Patricia Lynch, and Superintendent of Public Buildings Roy McClanahan.

Task force still working on underground tank law

by Arlene Surprenant

"We've waited a whole year." This statement by selectman Bob Cain seemed to sum up the feeling of impatience felt by members of the Acquirer Protection Task Force at their meeting Monday night. However, judging from problems still to be ironed out, members will have to wait a little longer before Wilmington's proposed Underground Storage By-Law finally comes up for a Town Meeting vote.

Task force members met with Dave Blackmar of the state Dept. of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE), who was present to provide assistance in formulating a strong law to protect Wilmington's groundwater. According to Blackmar, as far as he knows, there are no state regulation standards for underground storage tanks. Instead, this is usually handled locally, through regulation set up by the board of health on a bylaw. The only laws which would be challenged by the state, said Blackmar, would be those inconsistent with state law or which don't provide enough protection to the underground water supply.

Wilmington's proposed bylaw is "much more restricted" than any state regulation, said selectman and task force member Jim Stewart, and is solely for testing and policing underground storage tanks.

The original proposal formulated last fall calls for the initial registration of every tank located below ground, including those on homeowner's property; an annual renewal of all tanks through the fire chief and board of selectmen; the monitoring of underground tanks to prevent leakage; and requiring all new tanks to be constructed of fiberglass reinforced plastic and encased in concrete vaults.

The bylaw as partially modeled after bylaws in other towns, such as Burlington and Bedford. It has already undergone scrutiny by the Bylaw Study Committee. Now it is in the hands of the task force and Town Counsel Alan Altman, who is looking at it from a legal standpoint.

Fire Chief Dan Wandell told Blackmar that even though they haven't received a written decision from Altman yet, Altman "strongly suggests" they go with a bylaw (rather than a regulation) as he can best defend a bylaw.

Blackmar pointed out that Wilmington might want to draw up a regulation now, as it may deal with emergencies more quickly and be easier to amend, and later come up with a bylaw. He expressed concern that "at town meeting, the bylaw may be weakened where it should be strong" and it may be too technical to understand.

All present seemed to feel Stewart's sense of urgency "to get something on the books soon."

Right now, said a frustrated Cain, "we change it (the bylaw) every time we come in to a meeting."

Dr. John Sullivan A new doctor takes over an old practice

Dr. John J. Sullivan hopes to carry on a 54-year tradition - a tradition of family-centered medical care for the Wilmington community and surrounding towns.

On July 1, Dr. Sullivan, an internist and pediatrician, took over the medical practice at 172 Middlesex Avenue, Wilmington, a practice which was started back in 1931 by Dr. Ernest MacDougall, a general practitioner.

Hundreds, even thousands of families from Wilmington, Reading, North Reading, Woburn, Billerica, Tewksbury, Andover and other area communities received most of their medical care over the next 35 years from Dr. MacDougall, first at his office on Church Street, Wilmington, and then at his office at 190 Middlesex Avenue. Dr. MacDougall died in 1966, and the following year, another general practitioner, Dr. Ralph Lepore, assumed the practice; five years later, he moved it to its current location at 172 Middlesex Avenue.

Over the 18 years that he had the practice, Dr. Lepore continued the tradition of providing primary care to babies, children, adults and the elderly of the Wilmington area until his retirement this June, when Dr. Sullivan took over.

"We've seen the same families year after year - we feel very close to our patients," says Joanne Ethier, R.N., who has worked for the practice for the past 18 and one-half years. "To me, that's the best part about this kind of practice, knowing the people. They're not just passing through, the way they do in a clinic setting."

That's the way it is in a family-centered practice, the nurse adds. "We have a very close relationship with the people, and that's a nice feeling. Some of our patients have even moved to the Cape, and to New Hampshire, but they still come back here."

Another face familiar to patients

who've come to the Wilmington medical office over the years is Hermine Brailey, who has been the business manager of the office since 1967.

"We've known the children since they were babies - we've watched them grow up," says Mrs. Brailey. "And now," she adds with a smile, "we're seeing them getting married and starting families of their own."

Dr. Sullivan, who is board certified in both internal medicine and pediatrics, intends to continue the tradition of family-centered medical care at the Wilmington doctor's office. "Our goal is to go on providing the same personal medical care to both adults and children that Dr. MacDougall gave in years gone by and that Dr.

Lepore gave until his retirement," the physician explains, "with the exception of obstetrical care."

"We want to continue to offer the same medical services the community has received in the past - treatment for patients with acute medical problems, chronic medical problems such as hypertension, diabetes and cardiac disease, injury, and other conditions such as allergy problems."

Dr. Sullivan has admitting privileges at Winchester Hospital and Choate-Symmes, and comes to the Wilmington practice after serving as an internist for the past seven years at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington. During his years at the Regional Health Center, he also served for a year as coordinator of the center's residency program in primary care internal medicine, a program affiliated with Tufts University Medical School and Faulkner Hospital. He is an assistant clinical professor of medicine at Tufts.

Dr. Sullivan, who grew up in Brighton, now lives in Andover with his wife, Jane, and their three children. He earned a bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, a master of science degree in the same field from Northeastern University, and received his M.D. degree from Tufts Medical School.

He then served as rotating internist at Rhode Island Hospital in Providence, and was a junior assistant resident in surgery at the same hospital. Dr. Sullivan subsequently served as general medical officer for three years for the U.S. Public Health Service. The first two years, he practiced medicine from the Indian Health Service, working with the Mescalero Apaches in Mescalero, Arizona. The third year, he served at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy Hospital in New London, Conn. He returned to Rhode Island Hospital to do a two year residency in pediatrics as well as a two year residency in internal medicine, and then moved to this area to work at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington.

Caring for patients in a family-centered practice such as the one he has just assumed in Wilmington, Dr. Sullivan expects, will be both challenging and enjoyable. "Being in private practice is a happy change for me. This is the kind of practice where I'm seeing the same patients on a continuing basis. I enjoy getting to know my patients, and I find the variety challenging as well - you're dealing with a wide range of medical problems."

"And I'm very fortunate to have Joanne and Hermine here still," the physician adds. "They know Dr. Lepore's patients, and the patients know them. For me, and for the patients, people like them are important. I'm sure it's comforting to see a familiar face when you come to the doctor's office."

25 years ago

The August 4, 1960 edition of the Town Crier noted that:

The first picket line in Wilmington, involving a labor dispute was pacing in front of the Benevento Gravel Pit. The Independent Union of operating engineers wanted recognition. Wilmington residents in the line included George Jensen, and Anthony Micalizzi. Employees of Redimix, on the same site, already members of the union, refused to cross the picket line.

Nine hundred and ninety-five people took part in a polio clinic. The town sanitarian praised the work of boy and girl scouts and campfire girls in passing out 5000 leaflets advertising the clinic.

The grand opening of Zayre in North Woburn marked the beginning of business in the new, modern shopping center with 50,000 square feet of air conditioned departments. The store employed 125 to 175 people and supplied one of the largest parking areas in New England.

Fitzgerald Fuel was low bidder for supplying number two fuel oil to the town of Wilmington for the next year with a contract to deliver 117,000 gallons at the price of 10.02 per gallon to the smaller buildings.

Petro of Boston was awarded a contract for number six oil for the high school, about 3,166 barrels at the price of 2.72 a barrel. Oil for the Wildwood, Glen Road and Boutwell Street Schools (number five) would be supplied for 3.29 a barrel; about 125,000 gallons.

Helen Doyle of Harris Street won a 21 inch tv-stereo-phonograph-radio at the Lions Club outing. Helen Linden of Dartmouth Avenue won a toaster.

Joseph, DeMaggio, 14 and his brother, Dennis, 13 were pictured before leaving by train for a California vacation.

Renee LaRivee of Concord Street was preparing to host the annual Democratic cookout.

The John Cosmons of Salem Street just returned from a visit to Mrs. Cosman's mother in New Brunswick.

Lydia Wicks of Parker just returned home from a vacation in Florida. The July 28, 1965 issue of the Town Crier carried an ad proclaiming that Alma's (a coffee shop) of 1 Grove Avenue, would offer pizza for $1 that week. The ad, actually was printed a week too early and Alma's had no pizza. There were several red faces involved, but the error was rectified in the August 4 edition - Alma's ad was repeated and this time, they did have the pizza.

Nema Miller celebrates 80th

Nema Miller, for a lady of 80 summers, is a very spry person. She and her husband Bert, both of Wing Road, Wilmington were guests at the Ed Nash home on Woburn Street, July 28. It was the occasion of her 80th birthday. Bert is 89, and the couple will celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary next summer.

Nema was, for several years the president of the Wilmington Council on Aging. Born in Everett, of a large family, she was the youngest child. The family joke (or legend) is that she was so named because she was the last child - Nema being Amen spelled backward.

Vacation Bible School

The First Baptist Church of Wilmington has announced that Vacation Bible School will begin Monday, August 5 and conclude on Friday, August 16. Classes will be held Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. at the Abundant Life Christian School, 17 Boutwell St., Wilmington (657-8710). Classes are scheduled for children from three through grade six and are open to all.

The theme this year is "The Sunshine Factory" based on a series of Christian films for children by that name. In addition to these films, each day will include handwork, crafts, music, recreation and light refreshments. A musical based on the Ten Commandments will be presented at Parent's Night on Thursday, August 15 at seven o'clock at the Abundant Life Christian School.

All children are welcome. More information may be obtained by calling 657-8710. Class enrollments are limited so students should get their early. Registration will begin at 8:30 a.m.

A visit with artist Tina Prentiss

by Lauren Terrazano

Enthusiastic. That's the adjective renowned Wilmington artist Tina Prentiss uses to describe herself. Sitting before me, she sports a medium-sized straw hat with fruit enveloping the brim. One cannot help but notice the brooch on her blouse depicting the color palette of an artist.

This unique woman granted an interview on a recent lazy summer afternoon at the Wilmington Library. Delving into her history, it's realized that perhaps her first inclination toward art began when she was very young and won a bronze medal in a junior high school art contest. Raised in the greater-Boston area, she is a 1933 graduate of the Massachusetts College of Art.

Her work is extensive, ranging from lucite sculptures to oil and acrylic paintings. Her works are widespread throughout the country, not to mention the world. Her accomplishments range from being an artist, mother, teacher and writer. She was a guest artist, representing the United States in "Creative Woman," at the Royal Society for Art in Adelaide, Australia. Two of her wallpieces were selected for exhibition for the "Images of America" series at the Goethe Institute. Also, slides of her lucite sculptures were shown in the 1984 International Exhibition.

Possibly her most prestigious accomplishment is her series of symbolic portraits that have hung in the Smithsonian Archives of American Art. She takes great pride in these portraits and feels they express "the spirit of the person, rather than their physical characteristics." Some of the subjects for the symbolic portraits are Admiral Byrd, Albert Schweitzer, and Brad Washburn - director of the Museum of Science.

Tina had a six month exhibit of paintings at the U.S. Department of Labor, Womens Bureau, Washington. She was a colloquia speaker for "Contemporary Women Artists" course at Tufts University. Also, she was a panelist and workshop leader for annual conferences on "Women in the Visual Arts," at Leslie College and Massachusetts College of Art. She taught art, art appreciation, applied art, English and career counseling. Tina has participated in 15 solo shows and her works have been viewed in France, West Germany, and British Columbia, as well as the United States. They have also appeared in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, Fitchburg Museum, and Attleboro Museum. Presently, some of her paintings are being displayed at the Coolidge Bank in Cambridge and the Arlington Trust in Wilmington.

Tina has travelled extensively. She was a columnist and feature writer for International Travel News and a restaurant reviewer for Boston Today.

She served as the chairperson for the Wilmington Arts Council in 1980. Very active in the organization, she made lasting contributions. Despite her varied life, art has always been Tina's first love. Her works demonstrate her dedication and endurance. She explains, "The true artist is a person who is a unique thinker with individual ideas and who foregoes everything else for art."

When asked if there is one specific influence that affects her motivation, she replied, "I'm affected by the weather. If it's a gloomy day, I don't want to get out of bed. On a sunny day, I want to lick the world." As mentioned before, enthusiasm plays a predominant role in her works, as well as her life. In her Skyscape series, which is currently on display at the Arlington Trust in Wilmington, she expresses a feeling of happiness and serenity. She adds, "Life is hectic among people. They need something calming, serene and restful. I try to express the feeling of serenity in this series."

Tina feels strongly about women's rights, yet refuses to be labeled a feminist. Why? She feels that the word is "misunderstood."

She was recently accepted into a program at Massachusetts Institute of Technology where she would learn about the new concepts in artwork with lasers and computers. She declined the acceptance, but feels that she has "encouraged women (in believing) that age barriers have fallen." She is astonished that doors that were never open to women are now ajar. "I'm very excited about it. I think it's marvelous," she adds.

Plans for the future? Tina's longtime goal is to write an inspirational book including art. A task that shouldn't be too difficult for this accomplished woman.

Developer seeks access

A developer seeking to build an office development alongside Route 93 in Woburn has gone to Land Court seeking the right to cross residentially zoned land in Reading. The development would be on the east side of Route 93, with access through the former Hupper property on West Street. Although the land is in Woburn, police and fire protection would have to come from Reading. Traffic from the complex would end up on West Street in Wilmington.

A story in the Monday edition of the Daily Times Chronicle reported that the Reading town counsel has answered a petition in court. That petition, filed by Edward Callan interests, after the Reading Zoning Board of Appeals made no determination on his application for a variance to cross residential land.

Callan, who also owns the former Corey property at Routes 93 and 125 in Wilmington, applied unsuccessfully to the Wilmington Water Dept. for water for the Woburn project.

Callan proposes to build a development of four buildings of two or three stories on the 40-acre parcel.

Dorothy Orner

Dorothy Edna Orner (Hack) of Harare, Zimbabwe (formerly Saalisbury, Rhodesia) died quietly Friday morning, July 26 following a long illness.

Mrs. Orner was a retired missionary teacher with the American Board of Foreign Missions at Mount Silinda, Rhodesia.

She was born in October, 1889, in the town of Ugi, South Africa, in the Transkei region. Her parents were dairy farmers who specialized in making cheese. There were four girls and two boys in the family.

Mrs. Orner married American-born Arthur Jerome Orner, who had joined the mission in 1909, at the age of 21. In fact, he turned 21 on board ship enroute to Rhodesia. Mrs. Orner taught in the native school at the mission, and often accompanied her husband on his many trips into the Rhodesian bush country in his capacity as inspector of out-station schools. This often required days of walking through the wildest parts of the country which were infested with wild animals and tropical diseases. She continued her work on the mission, and contributed substantially toward the education of the black people in that part of Rhodesia, while Mr. Orner taught practical skills such as carpentry and brick making.

In addition, Mrs. Orner taught in the school for children of the missionaries, and was paid a salary by the Rhodesian government, which was always very generous in its support of the missionaries' work.

Mrs. Orner is survived by three sons and a daughter. Henry, who runs a large farm in southern Zimbabwe, Helen (Greener) who lives in Harare, Zimbabwe; George Orner of Martha's Vineyard, and John, who lives on Wildwood Street in Wilmington. Two other daughters, Betty and Doffy have died. There are many grandchildren scattered all around the world. Arthur Orner died in 1953 and Mrs. Orner retired from the mission and lived thereafter with her daughter in Harare.

Thomas Cavanaugh

Thomas E. Cavanaugh of 24 Forest St., Wilmington died suddenly Saturday at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington.

Born in Everett, 71 years ago, the son of the late Nora (Long) and the late Michael Cavanaugh, he was educated and spent his younger years in Malden; and lived in Wilmington for the past 32 years.

Mr. Cavanaugh served in the U.S. Army during World War II and prior to retirement was a custodian at the North Intermediate School. He served the school system for 12 years and was involved in the St. Thomas Church CCD program; the Reading Art Association and the Wilmington and North Woburn senior citizens.

Mr. Cavanaugh is survived by his wife, G. Marguerite (Ford) Cavanaugh; his son Stephen M. of Woburn; his two stepdaughters, Mrs. Judith Kirk and Mrs. June Gillis of Woburn; and his sister, Mrs. Ethel Raymond of Kingston, N.H.

The funeral was held from the W.S. Cavanaugh & Son Funeral Home Tuesday morning followed by a funeral mass at St. Thomas Church celebrated by the Rev. Michael Kearney. Interment took place in Wildwood Cemetery.

College board prep course

The St. Francis Institute will offer sessions for students who wish to prepare for the taking of the S.A.T. and P.S.A.T. These classes will take place on Thursdays, August 1, 8, 15, 22 from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 4 p.m. This same series will be offered Fridays, August 2, 9, 16, 23 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The subject matter will comprehensively cover verbal and quantitative content and skills.

On Tuesdays, the Institute has set aside time for youngsters in the lower grades by having courses in basic math from 9 a.m. to noon and in English (reading, vocabulary, grammar, and writing) from 1 to 4 p.m. Students will also be taught how to answer test questions and how to acquire other skills by practice.

The Institute aims to enroll from three to six students in each class. However, private tutoring is still available as an alternative. Evening sessions are suitable for adults.

One may inquire about other subjects and test preparations; special mention is made of the law school admission test.

To attend an assessment session and for more information, write to the St. Francis Institute, P.O. Box 263, Andover, Ma. 01810 or call Fr. Lucius Anheise, O.F.M. at 851-7910.

The long road to start of high school renovations

Dear Larz:
"Raise your Sights" was John Brooks' constant plea to the Wilmington townspeople regarding education for their children. When he drove me home from the Excellence-in-Education Committee meetings, he would sound fourth on that issue and I would tease him that we'd put that slogan on his gravestone...never guessing it would be so soon that we lose this champion in public service.

I believe he would be very pleased if all parents would pressure the State Legislature to raise the graduation standards to be more meaningful and more likely to get young people into better jobs, something hard to do with the basic requirement only one year of American history and three years of gym!!

Even though he fought firmly, sometimes alone, for what he believed in, John was always the peace-maker. Bless him!

Sincerely,
Tina

As one of the first appointed Arts Council members, I had the pleasure of witnessing how hard Tina worked to make the Arts Council in Wilmington a success.

At first the Arts Lottery was slow producing money so the town manager gave Tina a pittance to start with.

Having faith that the Arts Council would someday be a success, Tina even dug into her own pocket for funds to help make it a reality.

Meetings were held - plans made - a tea and an art show at the Wilmington Public Library to help find the talented artists in our town. An art show, at the opening of the Reading Savings Bank - now MassBank, at which time Tina experienced health problems.

Thank's to Tina's belief and devotion to the success of the Arts Council, the committee was well established when Megabucks finally succeeded -

I resigned,

Sonja Maria Carlson

P.S. Just read Tina's letter in the July 24th Crier. I also thought I died and nobody told me!!

Dear Larz:

I would like to write this letter in defense to a news article in your newspaper on July 24, 1985 by name withheld.

This was concerning conditions involving a suitable place for the detention and protective custody of animals under my direct supervision and care.

On the day in question, such place was and is suitable with the necessary food and water and all animals were and are in excellent shape under my care.

If any animal that is apprehended by me or whatever and needs medical attention I immediately transport same to my veterinarian. All this can be verified by witnesses.

Thank you for your time and cooperation.

Respectfully submitted,
Officer Joseph Balestrieri
Police Dog Officer

Dear Larz:

Before much more time lapses since your Fourth of July edition containing, "Council for the Arts keeps Adele Passmore busy" - I would like to add a few facts to Arlene Surprenant's well written article...

When the Arts Council was formed in 1980 - an act of the legislature to have an Arts Lottery - rules and regulations were set forth City and Town Officials were given consent to appoint committees of residents having an interest in promoting the arts in all communities throughout Massachusetts...

Tina Prentiss was chosen the first chairman of the Arts Council - appointed by the town manager and selectmen, chosen for her qualifications and administrative ability.

point of view

How do you say good-bye to a friend; to a man who has earned the respect of his community?

How do you say good-bye to a friend who was a private man in a public world? A man who valued his privacy, yet valued other things more.

How do you say good-bye to a friend who possessed dignity and wisdom, eloquence and the power to persuade, and that bulldog quality of tenacity which enabled him to get the job done?

How do you say good-bye to a friend who cared enough to rise to the challenge? A man who cared about his god, his fellow man, the availability of the arts, a sound education, upgrading standards, and much, much more.

How do you say good-bye to a man who lived life to its fullest, giving his all where a lesser man would have given up?

How do you say good-bye to a friend? In the case of John Brooks, not easily at all.

Go with God, John.

-A. Surprenant

by Arlene Surprenant
Friday's groundbreaking ceremony marked a milestone in the three year history of Wilmington High School's $6.5 million renovation project.

It also proved what a combined effort by parents, town officials and school personnel and a large amount of dedication and perseverance can accomplish.

According to PBC Chairman Diane Allan, the project dates back to October, 1982 when the Permanent Building Committee was reactivated to study the high school building. This was a direct response to two reports, one warning that the school's accreditation would be in jeopardy unless the "deteriorating condition" of the building was improved.

At that time, the PBC consisted of chairman Marvin Weiner, Robert DiPalma, Andrea Silverman, Bernard LaVita, and Allan. The present committee consists of Allan, LaVita, Robert Soper, Paul Butt and Edward Kaminski. Mark Peters also served in the interim.

Members of the PBC met weekly, made site visits to the high school, conferred with the educational staff and department heads, and finally decided to seek the services of a consultant to get an idea on what work was necessary.

The committee was voted $35,000 at the 1983 Town Meeting to hire Design Partnership of Cambridge, an architectural firm, to work up a set of conceptual plans for the building. The firm came up with the $6.5 million figure to complete the total renovation.

Because a vote was needed to override Proposition Two and a Half, voters went to a special town meeting in November 1983. The motion, unfortunately, went down in defeat.

At this point, it was time to regroup forces and rethink ways to educate the public on the importance of an improved facility and the necessary funds to get the job done.

A lot of the credit for the renovation getting underway at all has to go to the parents, former superintendent Dr. Carol Sager, and the school committee who, in January 1984, pulled together a Renovation Task Force whose primary purpose was to educate Wilmington voters.

That task force initially consisted of nine members garnered from the various school PACs: chairman Lorna Stockbridge, Bunny Frey, Joanne Neale, Cheryl Soderquist, Karen Armada, Liz Wheeler, Karen Heller, Maureen Sheehan, and Elery Shaw. However, in a few short months, word got around until 85 people had joined the committee and the snowballing effort to get the renovation passed.

At first, said Stockbridge in a telephone interview, the task force didn't have "any great expectations" as they felt they were "just apprentices" and not politicians.

However, after holding weekly meetings "to throw around ideas" and try to organize a publicity campaign, the small group started to meet with success.

Using the popular slogan Renovate to Educate, members held coffee hours, enlisted the media's help, wrote letters to the editor, spoke to and enlisted the support of local organizations, and held a telephone campaign to contact every voter in Wilmington.

They became adept at involving teachers, school principals, the selectmen and other town political leaders in their campaign until Wilmington, said Stockbridge proudly, "finally realized the task force was making an impact."

The piece de resistance, to anyone who participated, was the rally held on the town common on April 14, 1984, just one week before the crucial vote to once again try to override two and a half.

Though it was primarily held to afford citizens a chance to tour the high school and see the poor conditions for themselves, the carnival-like atmosphere of the rally appealed to all ages. Teachers and PBC members led tours through the building throughout the day, each school in the district sold everything from homemade foods and baked goods to buttons and t-shirts in colorful booths set up on the common, and children were treated to a moonwalk on the tennis courts adjacent to the school parking lot.

The whole publicity campaign, emphasized Stockbridge, was "a group effort." She credits many people with the success of the undertaking. People like Sandra Curtin, who did a "great job" of pulling the rally together; Dolores Silva, who coordinated rides to the polls; Dave Moriarity, who along with nine out of town teachers contacted residents by phone; Anne Linehan who worked behind the scenes on publicity and was responsible for getting Stockbridge on a local cable show; those teens who helped babysit the day of the rally and those teachers who gave up free time to lead tours, and State Rep. Jim Miceli who pushed for and got extra funds.

Everyone seemed to be behind the effort, said Stockbridge, and because "we worked on something we truly believed in and people believed in us," the renovation finally got underway.

Bearing this out were two important affirmative votes: one on April 21 allowing the town to exempt the bond needed to fund the renovations from the provisions of Prop Two and a Half, and one at Town Meeting on April 28 to permit the town to borrow the money to finance the renovation.

In September, 1984, the final design contract for the building was signed.

In looking back, one must agree with Dr. Sager's statement in the May 9, 1984 issue of the Town Crier that "none of us is ever as important or powerful as all of us."

Now it's up to all of us to keep the momentum going in the months ahead.

New siding is being installed on the Wilmington Masonic Hall by the Barden Home Improvement Co. Built in 1885, the building was designed as a laboratory for Dr. Henry Hiller, and originally had four turrets. After the Masons bought the building in 1905, they removed two of the turrets. The turrets, incidentally, will not have siding applied, but will have the existing shingles painted.

Regional Health Center to expand

Paul L. Downey, president of Choate-Symmes Health Services, announces that significant increases in patient utilization of all services at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington have resulted in overcrowding of the main level and the decision to expand into the lower level.

"Patient registrations have grown from 21,000 in 1978, the first year the Health Center was open, to 80,000 this year," Downey said.

"On a daily basis," he continued, "as many as 300 individuals receive care by appointment and non-appointment, and each month, 1000 persons go to the Health Center for the first time, seeking primary and specialty medical care as well as round the clock urgent care."

"The 30 percent increase in the number of patient visits during the past two years has forced us to take a serious look at the space constraints and to determine that if we are going to continue to provide the comprehensive level of care that our communities have come to expect, we must expand."

The Choate-Symmes president explained that when the Regional Health Center was built, trustees and administrators encouraged the building committee to support the provisions of a full basement in anticipation of the time when patient utilization and the health care needs of the communities would dictate the need for additional space.

"We are fortunate to have this lower level, which enables us to add 16,000 square feet of treatment and service space, and to do it as cost-effectively as possible," said Downey.

Nicholas A. Balog, vice-president of the Health Center, announced that construction will begin in early September on Project I, which will convert the lower level into patient treatment and waiting areas and physician offices. Project II will begin in September, 1986, and will include a larger and more efficient Health Records Department, employee cafeteria, conference room and receiving area.

Completion of Project I will transform the present one-room physical therapy area on the main level, with cramped quarters assigned to occupational and speech therapy, into separate areas for each of the three patient treatment programs. In addition, ophthalmology and pediatric/adolescent medicine will move into expanded locations.

The space on the main level presently occupied by these departments will then be re-designed for occupational health services and other physicians' offices such as internal medicine. Occupational and speech therapy Health Services and other physicians' offices such as internal medicine. Occupational health services, regarded as one of the most comprehensive in New England, has witnessed a 320 percent increase in patient treatments in the last two years. Clients now include more than 250 area businesses and corporations, who depend upon Choate-Symmes staff for pre-placement and retirement physicals, on-site surveillance, worker compensation care and health education.

Although the need for additional space has been apparent, the Health Center staff has continued its commitment to meeting the health care needs of the communities (primarily Wilmington, Tewksbury, North Reading, Billerica and Andover) by adding medical specialties and programs and services in response to demonstrated needs.

In an effort to maximize space, congestion has been eased somewhat with the addition of evening and weekend hours.

Balog emphasized the importance of the building expansion program "to continue to meet the demand that area residents have for medical care."

George M. Hazel, M.D., medical director, added, "Many residents will call that the health center was built to serve an area once identified as medically underserved. We now offer important medical services, and with the expansion of our lower level, we will be able to maintain our commitment to the health of the community."

The cost of Project I is set at $649,000, and Project II at $351,000.

To help offset these costs, a capital campaign - "Expansion '86" has been organized, with a minimum goal of $300,000.

Campaign solicitations will begin within the organization itself. Division chairmen will be announced and efforts are underway to solicit to physicians, Choate-Symmes trustees and members of the Regional Health Center's Community Board of Directors, employees and volunteers for three-year pledges. The second phase of the capital campaign solicitation, scheduled to begin in mid-August, will extend to area businesses and corporations, patients and the communities in general. Foundation support will also be sought.

Kenneth D. Chisholm, vice-president for development, has created a commemorative gift opportunities program to memorialize a loved one or acknowledge a donor's generosity. A room or area of the building commemorates with a level of giving can be selected and a plaque affixed to a wall in recognition of the gift. All gifts are tax-deductible. For additional information about making a gift or pledge, Chisholm can be contacted at the Health Center or at Symmes Hospital.

Tewksbury Police adopt new policy on lockouts

Drivers who inadvertently lock the keys inside their car will only have their car doors re-opened by Tewksbury Police under life or death emergencies, according to a new policy Police Chief John Sullivan put into effect Monday. Police, however, will still assist lockout victims by referring them to a qualified locksmith.

In the past, police have kindly helped lockout victims by using a special device to open their car doors without the key. The device, which is illegal for a private citizen to own, slides between the door and window, latches on the lock and opens the door.

But, because of increasingly complex lock systems which are easily damaged by the device and the possible liability police officers face when performing the task, Chief Sullivan has decided to end the practice.

"We won't do it unless it's a life saving event like a child locked in the car or an animal," said the chief. "As much as I hate to do it, that's going to have to be the policy," he added.

Saying the practice of opening car doors for lockout victims has been good public relations and that he'd like to keep it going, the chief pointed out that several police departments across the nation have been sued when an officer performing the function has either scratched the car's paint or damaged the lock mechanism.

Although the Tewksbury force has been faced with no such suits, the chief said one woman complained after her car paint was scratched during the procedure.

The chief also fears it may not be enough to have a lockout victim sign a waiver form before the officer performs the function, because a suit could still result if the victim claims the waiver was signed under duress.

The chief also says that police officers are not trained to perform the function and have only been doing it as a gesture of good will. Because of the growing number of suits evolving from police opening locked car doors, national police agencies are recommending local departments adopt a policy against doing it unless an emergency situation exists.

Police will now refer all non-emergency lockout victims to a licensed locksmith. The locksmiths are trained professionals in opening all kinds of car doors, the chief says, while adding they have liability insurance covering them for accidental damage.

Police will put the lockout victim in touch with a locksmith who will charge about $20 for the service, he said. Some motor clubs and insurance companies provide payment for the services of a locksmith.

The occurrence is more commonplace than one would expect. Each week police receive several calls for lockout victims.

The chief recommends drivers protect themselves against the anguish and embarrassment of being locked out of their vehicle by carrying a spare key in their wallet or purse. The chief also recommends drivers purchase an inexpensive hide-a-key box and store a spare key in it. The hide-a-key is a small box with a sliding cover and magnetic bottom that will attach to any metallic area of the car.

Chief Sullivan, however, warns on the placement of the hide-a-key. If would do little good to place a hide-a-key under the hood if the hood can only be opened from inside the driver's compartment. A better place would be under a wheel well or fender.

Support group formed for families of people with MS

A support group for spouses and other family members of people afflicted with multiple sclerosis is being organized by the Wilmington Family Counseling Service, Inc.

People providing care an emotional support for a loved one with a debilitating, progressive illness often find themselves struggling to care for the patient, maintain an on-going family life, and feel like they have something left for themselves. They are often conflicted about providing for the needs of the MS victim and the needs of other family members and themselves. Talking with other people with similar circumstances with the help of a therapist to suggest alternative coping strategies can help to alleviate these conflicting feelings and facilitate new coping strategies.

The group will meet for three weekly sessions initially and then meet once a month or as frequently as the group feels is helpful. The evening meetings will begin in August unless that would conflict with vacation schedules in which case it would not begin until September. The group will be led by Robert Hartl, PhD, a licensed psychologist and staff member of the Wilmington Family Counseling Service who himself has a cousin with MS.

People who are interested in the group should contact Dr. Carol Golub at the Wilmington Family Counseling Service, Inc. at 658-9889 to find out more information and to specify times when they would be available to attend.

The Wilmington Family Counseling Service Inc. is a non-profit agency funded by the Town of Wilmington to provide individual, family, marital, and group psychotherapy. The agency has moved recently to Suite 103, Presidential Park, 314 Main Street, Wilmington.

Queen comes to town

Rosie and the "Queen and Her Court," a four member softball team that plays nine member men's fast pitch teams throughout the world, is set to play the League All-Stars of Wilmington at Aprile Field on Wednesday, August 7 at 8 p.m. The event will be sponsored by the Wilmington Rotary Club.

Rosie dazzles batters with a variety of over 16 different pitches, delivering them in a baffling combination of curves, risers, drops, knuckleballs, changeups and blazing fastballs. To entertain the crowd and further disturb batters, Rosie jazzes up her pitches by throwing them between her legs, from second base, and while being blindfolded.

Although Rosie is the star of this exhibition with her mind-boggling statistics, the surprising crowd pleaser combining skill and entertaining comedy is court jester Lotta Chatter. A wacky, gangling character who keeps the audience on the edge of their seats under the Bozo-like red hair, is a talented player. The lineup also includes catcher Mike Griffin, a "Pete Rose style" hitting sensation who sports a rifle-like throwing arm. His 10 years of experience has made him a seasoned veteran. Mike spent several years with the Atlanta Braves organization.

Handling the shortstop role is Scott Elwell. With his extremely quick moves and diving catches, he covers everything left of centerfield. Having been a decathlon champion makes him a well-rounded athlete, and with powerful wrists and a 6-4 frame, his homerun power is a pitcher's nightmare.

Advanced tickets may be purchased at Doyle's Hardware, Farmer and the Del and D & D Gulf. In addition, tickets may be purchased at the box office the night of the game. Admission is $3.00.

Playing stars Rosie Black, the Queen, with her court of Mike Griffin, Lotta Chatter and Scott Elwell, will be in town August 7 to tangle with the Wilmington All-Stars.

Long gone Tewksbury Senior All-Star outfielder Bobby Long (23) takes one last look at this Swampscott homer in recent action. Tewksbury lost, 4-2

Chief openings

The Lowell Jr. Chiefs Hockey Club - Mites have a few openings on the 1985/86 team roster. If you have an experienced Mite with above average desire and hockey skills and want him or her to participate in a competitive and developmentally compatible hockey program that stresses team concept, don't wait until it's too late. Practice starts in August.

The Lowell Jr. Chiefs Mites are members of the North American Amateur Hockey Association (NAAHA) and will play a full schedule in the Metro Boston Hockey League (MBHL) and participate in tournaments. The MBHL features fast moving highly competitive games in which checking and slap shots are allowed.

Last year's team was a great success, establishing a record of 20 wins, nine losses and three ties, qualifying them for the MBHL and North American playoffs in its first year of league competition.

The Lowell Jr. Chiefs Mite Team and MBHL Mite Division for the upcoming 85/86 season will be made up of veteran seven and eight-year-olds. If you want your hockey player to experience growth and glory as a Mite, call now. For more information on the Lowell Jr. Chiefs Mite program, call Bill Buckley at 454-9012.

toss

State Little League 13-year-old title

McLean, Tewksbury fall

After five postseason victories, midnight finally came for the Tewksbury American All-Stars Saturday afternoon at Lynn's Fraser Field, as the locals were edged, 3-1 by a tough Easthampton club in the Senior Little League 13-year-old All-Star State Championship game.

Standout pitcher Jim McLean went the distance for Tewksbury, allowing five hits while walking five and striking out two.

Steve Ha, Bob Carney, Jim Rogers and Tim Bedard were the offensive stars for manager Rick O'Neil's stars.

Superstars competition August 8

The 10th annual Special Needs "Superstars" sponsored by the Tewksbury - Wilmington Elks and the Wilmington Recreation Department will be held Tuesday, August 6 from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Tewksbury - Wilmington Elks ballfield on South Street in Tewksbury.

The six events are run by the staff at Camp 40 Acres and the special needs athletes will be coming from camp in Tewksbury, Dracut, Billerica, Methuen, Lowell, Camp Hope and J.T. Berry.

The sight of 300 competitors competing for the sake of competition is a welcome sight in these times of Olympic boycotts and baseball strikes.

So, come cheer a special needs athlete as he or she competes for the love of sport.

WHS physicals

Physicals for Wilmington High School athletic team candidates will be held at the Wilmington High School gymnasium on Sunday, August 25 at 9 a.m. for boys and 10:30 for girls.

Home centers a compromise between family and school

A little shopping insures safe daycare

By PENNY RICHARDS

Daycare. A difficult decision parents are facing as they bring themselves to terms with the economy and the fact that most families today must have two incomes to survive.

Once the decision to use a daycare service has been reached, there comes the tough task of selecting where and with whom the child will be placed. Parents sacrifice precious time away from their children, spend hard-earned money on care they know full well no one else is capable of providing as well as they can, and constantly hope and pray that the decisions made will balance in the end and that their kids will be happy, well-behaved and normal.

Scores of pages have been written and miles of film have been edited on all that is wrong with daycare. But there are good things happening in the daycare field these days, reflecting the thought and care several women are using in setting up family daycare homes in their respective homes.

Nancy MacLeod of Reading has been running a family daycare home for nearly a year. Other women interviewed preferred not to have their names mentioned.

MacLeod's reasons for starting her career in daycare were fairly simple. She was tired; tired of not being with her children; tired of working 30-plus hours per week as a dental hygienist and substitute teacher. She was beginning to find her job unfulfilling and draining.

With half of her paycheck going to cover child care expenses for her two daughters, she found herself "working for nothing." Her efforts were not bringing the financial gains that generally drive the two-income household. And even though the daycare situation she had for her two daughters was "excellent in every way," she felt there was a better alternative for her family. MacLeod began to explore the possibility of opening a daycare facility in her home.

She began discussing opening a family daycare home with her husband, Wayne. He was skeptical at first. He felt he knew his wife well enough to know that she would feel tied down, and was concerned that she would be locked into a commitment with other people that could not be easily changed. He had genuine concerns for his privacy and did not relish having his home "invaded" at 7 a.m. and full of running, noisy children until 6 each evening. In short, the idea sounded terrible. But as they talked and researched the options, they saw the positive sides. And, the financial gain possibilities were certainly worth considering beyond conversations over coffee in their kitchen.

The application process began through the state Office for Children. They learned that a "family daycare home" could easily be handled on their property. State regulations

NOT ALL FUN — Its not always playtime at the MacLeod house, although even the serious stuff like story reading doesn't look too bad. Above, Nancy MacLeod entertains Neil Foley, 3, and Katie, 2, and Samantha, 5, MacLeod.

Beauty, beast, or both?

By JIM ROUILLARD

Though she tips the scales at a cool 185 pounds, one member of the Richards family of Wilmington is a beauty of classic proportion.

Yet she's suspected by some to be a beast, as a result of idle speculation, rumor, and a certain sign on Route 62:

In North Wilmington it was whispered that she started out as a mere dog.

Then, near the Reading line, someone said she became a big dog.

Finally, on dark evenings near the Tewksbury line, by the waters of Silver Lake, or along the shores that ring the murky depths of North Reading's

Martin's Pond, it is rumored she has evolved into the big, big dog of Salem Street, a fearsome creature of tooth and sharp claw, to be loosed on children who disobey their parents.

This story is designed to cut away the flesh of rumor, and get to the bone of truth.

If you've ever toiled along Wilmington's Salem Street (Route 62) heading west in your sleek Subaru or battered old pickup truck, you may have noticed a sign on the right, just before the curve near Federal Street.

"Big Big Dog," the sign reads — and it's no exaggeration. Beauty Richards, who outweighs some football linebackers I've met, is the big big dog in question, and she knows the location of every faucet among the headstones of nearby Wildwood Cemetery, where she is something of a benign white legend among the children who see her there.

"Good thing I didn't bring my lunch box," one youngster likes to observe to Beauty's owner, Homer Richards, as he walks her to the cemetery on a leash. She loves romping there, Richards said, scouting out the faucets, not only to drink, but to douse her head when she's hot.

Beauty is no beast. But she's a fine watchdog, according to her owner.

She came to the house of Homer and Bernice (Robbins) Richards as a puppy about four years ago, when there was another resident watchdog, German Shepherd Candy (who has since been put to sleep); it may have been through her early association with Candy that Beauty became a watchdog — a characteristic unusual to most Saint Bernards, according to Richards.

Mr. Richards painted a sign then, "Beware of Dogs," but after Candy was put to sleep, and Beauty kept growing, he wanted to come up with a phrase long enough to use all the space on the existing sign. Hence: Big Big Dog.

There are two popular conceptions of the Saint Bernard breed, one accurate, one maybe

Offbeat tidbits of Americana

FM TALK Our far-flung correspondent is sailing off Cape Cod this week. Until his boat comes back to shore, here are some more of those offbeat tidbits of American history to mull over:

Congressmen are considered by many to be members of the most elite club in the world. It is hard to imagine any one of them finding time to be bored or to play practical jokes, yet apparently at least one of them did in 1921. Texas Congressman Lindsay Blanton inserted four-letter words into the Congressional Record. His colleagues censured him, 293 to 0. The ironic thing about this practical joke was that Blanton was a Presbyterian Sunday-school teacher and a prohibitionist!

John T. Scopes became the focus of one of the biggest national controversies to erupt in the mid-twenties. It all started, innocently enough, when Scopes, a school teacher, answered an ad in a Tennessee newspaper. The ad, placed by the American Civil Liberties Union, called for a teacher who would be willing to volunteer to teach the theory of evolution in public schools.

During the mid-twenties, a young, vivacious, outspoken blonde actress by the name of Mary Jane West, who'd become known as Mae West, was sentenced to ten days in jail for appearing in a racy play entitled "Sex," which, incidentally, she also wrote. Upon her release, it is rumored that her only comment was that the prison underwear was terrible.

Around the same time, Walt

Disney released his first animated motion picture, entitled "Plane Crazy."

Some aspiring actors will do anything just to get their feet in the door of a movie producer's office. In 1929, a young actor by the name of Charles Loeb was determined to meet a movie producer. He actually mailed himself from Chicago to a film studio in Culver City, California, in a box marked "Statue - Handle with Care." Loeb arrived at the studio in a semi-conscious condition, but told police that he was happy just to have made it through the gates of a major movie studio and into the office of a producer.

Another rising star in the twenties also had a scrape with the law. He was Bing Crosby, who was arrested for drinking in 1929, the height of the prohibition era. When the judge asked Crosby if he'd ever heard of the prohibition law, Crosby reportedly replied that nobody paid much attention to it. The judge proceeded to sentence Crosby to sixty days in jail.

Talk about frivolous controversies! Here's one that must've taken the prize during the late thirties: the fashion

Officials take wait and see position on underground tank law

Water Commissioner Arthur Smith of Wilmington and Fire Chief Leonard J. Redfern of Reading prefer to wait, rather than take action at this time for regulations concerning underground fuel tanks. Both men feel the state may be soon proposing regulations.

So they told a meeting of the Regional Policy Water Group (RPWG), from North Reading, Reading and Wilmington, on July 24 in Reading. The consensus of opinion, according to the Reading Chronicle, with reference to the underground storage of fuel oil, was that tighter measures are needed.

The meeting was chaired by Rep. Geoffrey Beckwith, with Joan Blaustein of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC) in attendance.

North Reading's Timothy Twomey suggested a possible bylaw, to ban underground storage of hazardous materials. In the ban he would list hazardous materials in the Right to Know law of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Twomey would require fire department approval of underground fuel oil tanks, and the tanks to be made of reinforced fiberglass. He said no new tanks should be allowed in aquifer areas, nor near town wells.

Both Redfern and Smith wanted to see what the state had to propose, with reference to new underground tanks.

"We are heartless about underground storage tanks (in Wilmington)" Smith said. "Vaults are needed for single layer tanks, and all tanks must be made of fibre glass. You must apply for a permit to bury tanks, and if anyone wants a tank of over 10,000 gallons that person has to appear before the board of selectmen, to get a permit" he told the RPWG.

"We have become fanatical about tanks. We are looking for a bylaw that would require any tanks over 20 years old to be dug up and inspected," Smith said.

One possible option Smith suggested was to allow homeowners to request (or be requested) to have air pressure testing of their tanks. If the air pressure drops, then there is a leak.

Illegal hazardous waste disposal, and the role of the state in providing facilities for handling hazardous waste was discussed. Rep. Beckwith agreed that the state should have more to do, about the disposal. He told the RGWP that the state is looking for a better site selection process. "It is going to be tough to tell a community that we want a (hazardous waste) plant here, but there has to be a sense for the greater good."

Beckwith, after the meeting, said he felt it was really productive. "This is just what we needed, tonight" he said, as he gestured toward a group of Reading officials speaking with Smith.

Wilmington police news

During the week ending July 30, Wilmington Police Officers responded to 11 accidents, 23 alarms, 16 disturbances eight traffic complaints, three trespassing complaints and nine complaints involving trailbikes.

Medical assistance was rendered twice, four larcenies were checked out, and 13 protective detentions were made along with 10 arrests.

Four incidents of suspicious activity were investigated along with four reports of larceny and nine of vandalism.

One vehicle was reported, two stolen vehicles were recovered, one assault and battery was logged, six domestic problems were quieted and two sex crimes were reported.

Among the items reported stolen last week were vcr tapes, cassette tapes, radar detector, hub caps and gas.

Arrests

Tuesday evening Officer Steve LaRivee arrested Dion DeJesus of Rhodes Street for operating a motor vehicle without a license. The suspect was also charged with assault and battery on a police officer.

Officer Jim Cuoco and Matron Knickel picked up a local woman at the Tewksbury Police Station after a warrant arrest. Cynthia Dunnett of Woburn Street was transported directly to Woburn Court.

Early Thursday morning Officer Jim Peterson arrested Michael Shaw, 21, of McDonald Road on a motor vehicle default warrant. He was bailed for a court appearance later the same day.

Thursday evening a local man was arrested for the second time in three days. Dion DeJesus was arrested by Sgt. Rooney and charged with operating a motor vehicle without a license and driving so as to endanger.

A Burlington man was arrested Thursday evening after first being placed under protective custody by Officer LeGrand and searched at the police station. Louis Schleier, 22 of Marjorie Road, was charged with possession of class B drugs with intent to distribute.

Friday evening Officers Redding and Harris arrested Thomas Chapman of Wakefield at the Wakefield Police Station on a default warrant issued by Woburn Court. He was held in the lockup for the weekend.

Three Manchester, N.H. men were arrested Friday night at the Cumberland Store and charged with public drinking. A subsequent investigation revealed attempted flim-flam deals pulled at the Exxon and Hess stations. Timothy St. Pierre, Mark Gallant and Travis Edwards were then charged with larceny under $100. The arrests were made by Officers Neville, Redding and LeGrand. St. Pierre and Gallant were held in the lockup for the weekend as they were unable to make bail.

Friday night Officer Neville arrested a Franklin, Mass. man after an investigation of an accident at Burlington Avenue and Harris street. Bruce Bliss was charged with operating without a license and later charged with possession of marijuana after a search of his person. He was bailed for a Monday court appearance.

Accident

The traffic lights in the center were knocked out of commission Monday morning about nine when a trailer truck exiting Burlington Avenue took the corner too sharp and wiped out the light station and the control box for the system. Officer Spencer, who observed the accident, investigated. The operator Warren Mooney of Keene, N.H. related cars parked at the light forced him to turn too sharply. Luckily the morning rush was over. State DPW crews were able to install a new station and control box before the afternoon rush.

Mopeds and dirt bikes

There seems to be a lot of confusion about the regulations that apply to mopeds. Parents should be aware that the law dealing with mopeds is very specific and deals only with mopeds. Under Mass. Chapt. 90, sec. 1b, the most important requirement is that the operator be at least 16 years of age and must possess a learner's permit or a license.

The moped operator must obey all the traffic regulations except that they can pass on the right. Also, to qualify as a moped the machine must have pedals and it can not go over 25 mph, and it is supposed to have a registration sticker affixed to it.

Trail bikes, dirt bikes or whatever you call them are not allowed on a public way at all. The only place they should be operated is on private property with the consent of the owner. These machines have been the cause of considerable damage to public playground areas and private property. Any operator of a trail bike or moped found in violation is subject to having his or her bike towed and may be subject to citations costing over $100.

Offbeat tidbits of Americana

world argued whether women tennis players should wear white stockings or play barelegged.

Can you readers name the only nonwhite ever to be elected vice-president of the United States? He was Charles Curtis, a Kaw Indian, who served under President Herbert Hoover.

Government may have been smaller in the twenties, but it certainly wasn't any more efficient than it is today. In 1921 a committee was appointed to study the problem of unemployment in the United States. Eight years later the committee finally made its first report public. The committee concluded that there was no unemployment problem in the United States at that time. The committee, by the way, was chaired by Herbert Hoover.

In 1929 the University of Chicago abolished its football program after Roy Riegels ran sixty-four yards in the wrong direction during a Rose Bowl game. Warren Harding is one of the least-remembered presidents, because very little was accomplished during his term in office. One memorable event does come to mind, however: he was the first president to drive an automobile.

On September 19, 1923, a printer's strike in New York City caused the morning newspapers to unite. The result was one of the strangest mastheads of all-time. It read: New York American - The New York Herald - The Journal of Commerce - Daily News - The Morning Telegraph - The New York Times - New York Tribune - The World - New Yorker Staats-Beitung - II Progresso Italo-Americano.

In 1924, President Calvin Coolidge's son died after a most bizarre accident. He suffered a blister on his toe while playing a game of lawn tennis.

Calvin Coolidge was known as an eccentric president. He enjoyed having his head rubbed with Vaseline while he ate breakfast in bed. He was also known for his vicious pranks. He once asked a secret service agent to bait his fishing hook. Just as the agent was about to put the worm on the end of the hook, Coolidge yanked the line, causing the hook to puncture the secret service agent's finger.

When Coolidge left the White House he moved back to his modest home, which was one half of a two-family dwelling, in Northampton, Massachusetts. He became a newspaper columnist, and was paid one dollar for every word he wrote. He earned about three times his salary as president. Coolidge was not considered a particularly insightful columnist. He frequently wrote less than profound statements such as "When more and more people are thrown out of work, unemployment results."

The Roaring Twenties are frequently looked back at as the golden decade, a period of bubbling prosperity. According to the Brookings Institute, the bubbling prosperity never existed quite the way many of us like to think it did. In 1929, just prior to the stock market crash, the height of the so-called prosperous golden era, only 2.3 percent of American families had an income in excess of $10,000 a year. Only eight percent had incomes more than $8,000 a year. Seventy-one percent survived on incomes less than $2,500 a year; 60 percent on yearly incomes below $2,000, and 21 percent of American families struggled to get by on less than $1,000 a year. During a year when prosperity was supposed to have been so high, in reality, more than 70 percent of the country lived at or near the poverty level.

"These really are good times, but only a few know it." - Henry Ford, March 15, 1931. Make it a good week.

A little shopping insures safe daycare

called for no more than six children at any one time, including their own; and only two children under the age of 2 years, again, including their own children.

They would have to provide outlet plugs and radiator covers, gate their staircase and be sure that electrical wires were not exposed. These and the other regulations seemed well within their power to cover and correct. They had the necessary space requirements both inside and outside the house. They agreed that she could certainly handle up to four additional children at any time.

The MacLeod's live in a two-family home on Minot Street in Reading. They began their planning with the idea that their second floor apartment would be suitable for Nancy's facility. When the first floor tenants purchased a home of their own, the MacLeods renovated the first floor to open the entire house up for her family daycare home.

MacLeod now has 16 part-time children each week. Despite the number of parents working a full 40-hour week, all of Nancy's calls were for part-time care. And, oddly enough, not all of Nancy's parent clients are working. Several use her facility so that they can get out to shop, take classes, or to have an occasional break. More importantly, it gives their children valuable interaction with other kids.

The financial rewards have been numerous. Aside from the additional income, the MacLeods have been able to renovate portions of their home, make yard improvements, purchase a van and a piano — all in the name of running their business. They work closely with an accountant in order to keep their deductions in line with IRS laws. Since she provides two snacks and a lunch each day, portions of her grocery bill are also deductible, as are portions of utility payments.

Any parent knows child care does not come cheap. MacLeod charges $3 per hour. She formulates an activity plan each day.

"Any fool can open a daycare center like mine and stick the kids in front of the television set for eight hours. I won't do that — it's not what I would want someone else doing to my girls," she said.

Her activity plans include story reading, learning songs (particularly songs with related finger or hand actions), baking cookies, and, naturally, an afternoon nap.

As weather permits, the children will play in the sandbox, on the swing set or in the pool, all within her fenced-in yard.

"The van is the best investment we ever made; it gives me the freedom to take the kids to the beach or the zoo if the spirit moves us to do so," she said, recalling a trip to Bradlee's in Woburn on one occasion. "I didn't need anything and didn't buy anything, but we had a great time walking through the store, exploring and talking about all of the things we saw."

Her greatest pleasures come from those activities planned when the children make something to take home. She claims that parents love to see their children come home with something they have made.

"It gives parents tangible proof that their kids got something out of spending the afternoon at my house. Besides, the cards and gifts the kids make are priceless and beautiful, put together with thought and effort."

As she talks, her eyes scan the yard constantly and conversation is interrupted countless times so that words of encouragement, praise and caution are expressed to the children. Later, she is in the sandbox, her shoes cast aside and her feet being buried by three pairs of tiny but enthusiastic hands.

Nancy says the family daycare home, as opposed to a daycare center, provides the home environment parents would prefer for their children. The care is more personalized to each child because of the state's restriction over the number of children that can be on the premises at any one time. Nancy has an aide that is recognized by the state and is in the process of hiring another. This frees her on those occasions when an appointment takes her away from the house, without disrupting the service she provides to the parents.

Both the MacLeods feel the application process through the state is too easy and that tougher regulations must be added. To date, almost a year since opening, she has yet to be inspected by any state agency.

According to James Taylor, family daycare licenser for the state Office for Children, theirs is a license processing office. With 1,200 family daycare homes in their region, it is not possible to visit each home for an inspection. Some homes are inspected prior to the issuing of a license, but the majority of inspections are done after the license is issued, and often these are unannounced, spot inspections.

Taylor emphasizes that anyone doing daycare work in their home must be licensed by the state. His office welcomes and encourages phone calls, whether to ask questions about the state's policies regarding daycare facilities, or to make inquiries or complaints. Calls of a complaint nature will always be followed up with an inspection of the facility in question. Taylor's office is at 150 Causeway St., Boston, Mass. 02114; telephone 727-8367.

MacLeod said she knows her references were contacted by Taylor's office because those references told her so.

To MacLeod's credit, one of her parent clients claims to have visited three other homes before placing her son in her care. Despite specific state mandated in-house and yard regulations, this woman had seen dark and dirty rooms, badly overgrown yards, and numerous other violations of the regulations as MacLeod explained them. In contrast, her own yard is well-kept and fenced in, the designated playroom is brightly painted with colorful decorations on the walls, and scores of books, crayons and toys are stacked in boxes, all within easy but safe reach of small hands.

Even with 16 children under her care, the phone doesn't stop ringing. She gets two to three calls daily, and says that 90 percent are for infant care or from pregnant women who realize that they must find suitable daycare arrangements well in advance of the birth of their babies.

According to MacLeod and Taylor, the search for a daycare home should begin by checking with the state Office for Children before placing your child into any daycare situation, be it a family daycare home or a daycare center, and find out what the requirements for the facility are.

Inspect that facility carefully, ask questions, get the names of other parent clients and contact them. Don't be afraid or embarrassed to ask any question of anyone you can. Remember, it's the safety and well-being of your child that's at stake, and there is nothing more important than having the best possible alternative to your personal care at home.

The second lesson turned example here is that of the new business venture begun at home. In speaking with four other family daycare home providers, the reasons for starting the business and the levels of concern for quality care are identical.

One provider spoke of the increased insurance rider she was carrying: "Just in case, it's best to be protected fully." Several mentioned that they have taken Red Cross first aid and CPR classes. Most others are providing full-time care, but that can be a simple matter of your own preference, and what the market will bear at the time. There is no cost to apply for a license, and the requirements necessary for home renovations may be few and inexpensive.

It's a career that requires the ultimate in patience and care. It moves one step at a time, one day at a time. No one will send flowers on secretary's day, and there is an automatic 15-minute coffee break each morning, no two-martini lunches, no material benefits.

The rewards come from small faces that shine with pride at your words of encouragement — from sticky fingers and skinned knees that need your attention to hugs and kisses. There will be pride in the work that you do when it is done well, and the bond you will build with the children under your care.

MOVIE REVIEWS

Rochelle Flynn

The Emerald Forest and Silverado

The Emerald Forest Starring Powers Boothe, Charley Boorman, Dira Paes, Rui Polonah. Directed and produced by John Boorman. Screenplay by Rospo Pallenberg. Rated R (violence, nudity).

Director/producer John Boorman has always leaned toward stories of man, nature and mysticism (remember Deliverance and Excalibur). With The Emerald Forest he has finally come to a happy meeting of these three factions, although he does get heavy handed with the morality aspect of the story within the last 20 minutes.

This plot is based on a true story of an engineer whose young son disappeared in the Amazonian Rain Forest and of his ten year search for him. In this celluloid version of the tale, the young boy is abducted by the "Invisible People," a tribe of Indians that live basically as their Stone Age counterparts did.

The story really takes off, however, when the father, played by Powers Boothe, discovers his son, who is now a young warrior about to take a bride. Boorman's son, Charley, plays the adolescent Tomme, and he gives an incisive, innocent quality to his athletic performance.

As the story continues, we learn that Tomme has no intention of returning to the "civilized world," but does need his father's help in fighting the "Fierce People," cannibals who also do a lively trade abducting women for a shantytown brothel.

The Emerald Forest is lusciously, lovingly photographed by Philippe Rousselot, who makes us practically breathe in the damp air or soar like an eagle. The fact that Boorman lived with the Amazonian Indians for more than a year gives this picture an authenticity that greatly enhances our enjoyment of it.

The film can be enjoyed on several levels, the first being simply as an action/adventure pic. Or, one can immerse themselves in the mystical aspect of the film, which is intriguing until Boorman gets carried away with this and the morals issue and overkills the two themes during the film's denouement.

Lastly, and what is perhaps the most haunting topic of The Emerald Forest, is the idea Boorman presents of modern man raping our planet of natural resources in order to satisfy the god of progress. However, Boorman's zealousness as he tries to drive home his point about the destruction of the Rain Forest and the spiritual forces driving mankind left a bad taste in this reviewer's mouth. Despite this, it does remain one of the more interesting, intelligent and just plain beautiful films of the season.

Silverado Starring Kevin Kline, Danny Glover, Scott Glenn, Kevin Costner, Brian Dennehy, Linda Hunt, Jeff Goldblum, Rosanna Arquette, John Cleese. Directed and produced by Lawrence Kasdan. Written by Kasdan and Mark Kasdan. Rated PG-13 (violence, profanity).

Good movies are hard to come by. Good movies that are from a resurrected genre that are also rip roaring fun are even harder to come by. Hence, Lawrence Kasdan's new picture, Silverado, is a rarity, as it is one hell of a good movie that also breathes a little life back into the Old West.

Kasdan, who co-wrote, produced and directed, has constructed an idolizing monument to the western that is enhanced by the complex characterization of his four heroes that rarely emerged in the westerns of old. Unfortunately, the bad guys aren't given equal treatment, and we are barely allowed to get to know them, which means that we can't really hate them enough.

Kevin Kline is the loner of the group. A man with steadfast loyalties and a winning disposition who makes friends fast and kills enemies even faster. Scott Glenn is a steely-eyed man of intense determination who looks after his younger brother Jake (Kevin Costner), a happy-go-lucky rake with an eye for the ladies and knack for getting himself into trouble.

Rounding out the group is Danny Glover, a large black man fighting racism with compassion when possible and two rifles when necessary. The four men give stupendous performances, although if anyone shines just a bit more it would have to be Costner, who sparkles everytime he smiles and exudes a zest for life that is positively catching.

Silverado is the growing town into which these four horsemen ride. Kasdan magnificently captures the Old West from icy rivers to dusty, reddish roads to a weathered, utterly believable 1880's frontier town. Even the musical score seizes the gritty mood as it swells and soars with the driving action on the screen.

The supporting cast includes a dynamic Linda Hunt as a gracious saloon keeper, Brian Dennehy as the unscrupulous sheriff of Silverado, and John Cleese as a sheriff in a neighboring town who rules with his brain and sharp tongue. Jeff Goldblum portrays an opportunistic gambler who owns an interesting wardrobe, and adds to the comic relief. Rosanna Arquette appears as a pretty homesteader in a role that is all but wasted on her. She walks through all of three times and is never given a chance to

It doesn't matter that Silverado is as utterly predictable as the westerns of the 1930's and 1940's. The ensemble of actors work together like the cogs and wheels of a fine Swiss clock. The layered plot has more to it than it would seem at first glance and Kasdan has a light and humorous touch when needed, but does not shy away from the hand-clenching violence either. This film is definitely worth saddling up the old mare and moseying on down to the cinema fer.

Beauty from S-1

a little less so:

The first is of a huge, playful, puppylike clown who loves to romp with children; the second, of the gallant Saint Bernard, rum-keg round his neck, relieving distressed travelers lost in high Alpine passes.

The first conception is generally true, according to Richards. The latter, made popular by the English animal painter Edwin Landseer, is less likely, at least as far as the rum goes, according to canine authority Henry Davis.

Just as the sign outside the Richard household has remained a mystery and curiosity to many area residents, the origins of the Saint Bernard dog "are shrouded in as much mystery as has cloaked many other breeds, and yet in his present form he is really one of our oldest breeds," Davis wrote.

Beauty's appearance indicates she is one of the rarer of two varieties of Saint Bernard: the rough-coated, with long white hair and black or tawny spots.

Does Beauty drool? Oh yes, she drools, Homer Richards said.

"I have a desk I call my drool desk. Once that saliva gets onto a varnished surface, you can't remove it. There is an operation you can get to prevent the dog from drooling," Richards added, but he really doesn't mind the drooling, which he described as a minor, slightly unpleasant aspect common to the breed.

The Saint Bernard gets its name from the Hospice of Saint Bernard in the Swiss Alps, run by Augustinian monks. According to monastery tradition, the famous dog is a cross between a Danish-bull and a mastiff, a native hill dog. First mentioned in 1774, it was reportedly kept pure until 1812.

Davis adds that it is doubtful the Saint Bernards were used much for rescue, but more as guides, though the dogs were found to have such an excellent sense of smell that they could readily locate people overcome by storms.

No special training was required, Davis reports; the younger dogs would run with the older ones, forming a patrol. Two dogs would lie close to the victim to warm him; one would lick the victim's face to restore consciousness, and one of the dogs would go back to the hospice to alarm the monks. In 1815 and again in 1830, the hospice kennels were depleted, once by distemper, and once by an avalanche. After those disasters, the monks used Newfoundland and Great Dane stock to bring up the size of the Saint Bernards.

Only the males were used in the Saint Bernard Pass, according to Davis — so Beauty Richards would prove an unlikely candidate for rescue work — particularly in view of her talents as a watchdog.

"The largest dog in the world (in 1970) was a Saint Bernard, at 259 pounds, according to The New Dog Encyclopedia.

Before his retirement, he worked for 20 years at the Massachusetts Soldiers' Home in Chelsea.

North Shore Family Daycare Agency opens

Dori Henry, president, and William Connors, vice president of the Visiting Nurse Association of Greater Lynn and Joan Connuck and Andrea Joseph of Comprehensive Childcare Services met in Wakefield to sign a contract which will add a new family daycare agency to the area's childcare resources.

Located at 29 Tuttle St., Wakefield, North Shore Family Daycare, the newly created agency, is a joint effort of the Visiting Nurse Association and Comprehensive Childcare Services.

Joan Connuck, MA, formerly the director of the Early Intervention Program of the Visiting Nurse Association of Middlesex East and her partner, Andrea Joseph, BA, an early childhood education specialist with experience in preschool and family daycare, formed Comprehensive Childcare Services to respond to the growing demand for childcare in the North Shore area.

In forming North Shore Family Daycare with the VNA of Lynn, their intent is to recruit, train and provide ongoing supervision of family daycare providers. They will identify families in need of childcare and will offer them the security of quality care in supervised homes. The providers may be young mothers at home with their own children or energetic grandmothers. The primary qualifications are a love of children, an adequate home environment and a desire to provide quality care. They will receive training in such areas as first aid, child development, nutrition and assistance with licensing, and will be encouraged to develop a sense of professional identity through their affiliation with this supportive agency.

North Shore Family Daycare will provide parents and providers with assistance in determining the most suitable placement for the children and will guarantee year-round childcare availability. Parents will be able to choose from several contract arrangements for children aged 2 months through elementary school age. Those wishing further information can contact Joan Connuck or Andrea Joseph at North Shore Family Daycare, 246-4850.

Get up and go somewhere!

Coming Attractions

By William Pacino

The urge has been to get up and go somewhere. With this feeling in mind, we jumped in the car and headed north on Route 95 to the Gov. Alvin Fuller Gardens in North Hampton, New Hampshire.

You will need your car to travel to the gardens, but you won't have to navigate the crowded beach area. The gardens were designed in 1939 by the Olmsted Brothers' Brookline landscaping firm, to enhance the home of former Massachusetts governor Alvin Fuller. The house no longer stands, but the gardens are still spectacular. There are a number of different gardens, beginning with two open areas graced with roses and marble statuary. There is a very peaceful Japanese garden with a pool full of colorful carp, just before you enter onto the huge perennial garden.

The flower beds in this garden are rectangles, circles, triangles, and diamonds. From late spring until the first frost the perennials, supplemented by annuals, provide a glorious splash of color and texture. Around the garden are benches for resting and just plain enjoying the splendor of the garden.

Starting in the middle of June, fifteen hundred rose bushes - hybrid teas, floribundas, and grandifloras - transform the gardens into a perfumed heaven that lasts through September. A pair of greenhouses border one of the rose gardens. In one you'll find a wall of succulents, including cacti that tower over your head. Cherry tomatoes thrive on vines that climb the roof supports, while benches below support pots of shrimp plant, gloxinia, cyclamen, and hibiscus.

The directions to this quiet and beautiful spot are as follows: From Interstate 95 North, exit onto Route 1. Take Route 1 North to Route 101D; continue east on 101D to the junction with Route 1A. The Fuller Gardens are on Willow Street, 200 yards north of the junction of Routes 101D and 1A.

Off-Boston Theatre

Palfrey's Off-Boston Theatre will make its debut on August 7 at 8 PM with the presentation of the 1982 Obie Award winning "Top Girls" by Caryl Churchill. Portraying the realities which are faced by women executives within the twentieth century corporate world, the production will be the first in a series of four contemporary plays presented during the weeks of August 7-10 and August 14 to 17. All shows will be at Palfrey's Off-Boston Theatre located on 119 Palfrey Street in Watertown.

Other performances included in this offering include: Shepard's "Action", a portrait of four people trying to find their place within an apocalyptic vision of American culture; Beckett's "Catastrophe", a black comedy centering around oppression; and Pinter's "Precisely", a short piece about the absurdity of statistics.

For further information and advanced ticket sales, contact 720-1671 or 254-0199.

Phoenix Film Festival

Boston's first international film and video festival, scheduled to take place August 11th through 18th, will feature an unprecedented number of U.S. and world premieres of major motion pictures.

The opening night film of the Festival will be "Mishima", and it will be preceded by a gala opening night party at the Institute of Contemporary Art.

The closing night film will be the American premiere of the re-release of the 1954 movie, "The Glenn Miller Story". That showing will be preceded by a 1940's USO/Canteen party at the Park Plaza Castle.

There will be an on-going review of documentary films at the Sack Copley Place, an all-night movie marathon featuring the films of Jack Nicholson, videos at the Boston Public Library, Brattle Theater and the Metro nightclub, and a three-day professional conference at the Crane Estate in Ipswich.

CANOE SEASON at Horn Pond, Woburn has brought out many in recent weeks as evident in this scene as several fishermen are shown on the shoreline of the picturesque pond located near the Woburn-Winchester line. (KAP photo)

Tickets to all of the Festival events went on sale July 29th at the Sack Copley Place. For more information, call Film/Video International at 262-6325.

Things that caught our attention in the last week were gardens, movies and off-Boston theatre. But there is a lot more going on that does not capture our attention. If you have knowledge of events of interest to all, write, care of this local newspaper and tell us all about them. The summer is the right time to take in all these new events.

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

In the wild and wooly Western Frontier Days, the law, "West of the Pecos," was swift, hard and many times permanent. In Judge Roy Bean's era, any man accused of stealing a horse, was tried, convicted and sentenced all in the same day. The sentence generally handed down was a "suspended sentence," the person was "hung" the next morning.

In one of the many saloons in that area, someone shot a dog in the foot. The dog limped all the way home, got his gunbelt and hobbled back, swung open the swinging doors then standing on the middle of the saloon with guns drawn barked out "Aw right who shot my PAW?"

The therapeutic value of eating garlic is well known. I asked my Uncle John Shea, who is eighty nine years old what he attributes his longevity and bounding good health. "I eat a clove of garlic every day, that's my secret!" he responded. Standing ten feet away from him, I exclaimed, "Holy smokes, what makes you think that's a secret?"

I asked my friend Ed Baratta from Winchester, "That's a beautiful plant you have there, what is it?" It's from the Bigonia family, I'm taking care of it while they are travelling in Europe with Jim Rouillard." Kenny Binding introduced me to beautiful young lady, Debbie Pacer who is a secretary in an electronics parts company in Winchester. I met my wife, Kathy in an electronic lab in Woburn. The moment I set eyes on her I couldn't "resistor." Her "radiant" smile and "magnetic" personality soon "transformed" me so that I made up my mind to marry her. We had four children in six years so I was afraid to come home from work and ask "watts new?" What attracted me to her were my "rabbit ears" and a "capacity" to laugh easily. We "currently" have seven children and a "wire haired terrier."

We have all seen how the stock market broke the 1000 mark and is continuing to rise. I'm not in it but friends always give me tips on what I should buy. "Buy balloons before they go sky high." "Get in on the ground floor, elevators are sure to go up." "Designer jeans are sure to split." And so on. Now "bulls and bears" are OK, but watch out for "bum steers." Farmers never die they just wet their "plants." Bricklayers throw in the trowel, dentists look down in the mouth, attorneys lose their briefs and flower gardeners lose their bloomers.

Farewell, God be with you Fr. Ron Chaisson of St. William's Church, on your new assignment. Folks, there will be a farewell dinner for Fr. Ron on August 3 at the K of C Hall on Main St. in Tewksbury.

My two cousins Howie and Dean Murphy had to take a sign down in a hurry over their combination diner and gas station. It said "Eat here and get gas."

I extend a warm welcome to a new reader of Woodchips, Jim Cherniack of Derry, New Hampshire and Winchester

Some of the students who had a wonderful trip to Europe with Jim Rouillard are Mary Sheridan, Laura Barkman and Barbara McBride, all from Burlington, and Shawna Barry and Meg Sullivan from Andover.

My wife missed her usual afternoon nap, she slept right through it. Most women prefer beauty than brains, because as a rule men can see better than they can think. My wife Kathy puts on so much oil and cold cream at night she "slides out of bed every morning."

THE WILMINGTON WOMEN'S CLUB recently donated several azalea and rhododendron bushes to the Regional Health Center in Wilmington (RHCW). This is the third consecutive year that the club has donated shrubbery to help beautify the grounds of the RHCW on Salem Street. Judith Simmons (second from left), past president, said that the club plans to make the donation an annual event. With Mrs. Simmons are, from left, Elizabeth White, Jean Sottile, club president, and Helen Hanrahan.

The claws that refreshes.

Ahh, fresh stone crab and a cool, refreshing drink. What could be better? Only the grilled entrees in our CHERRYSTONES Seafood Bar & Grill. Or maybe the lobster in our main dining room. Come in today. For seafood, Cherrystones is it.

Interviewing for Sept. Positions

Meadowview Convalescent Home is conveniently located off Routes 93 and 28. Our wage scale allows us to offer a starting rate for new staff which gives credit for prior work experiences in the health care field. "Pay-Instead-Of-Benefits" program is for staff who do not wish to take advantage of our benefit package, but choose to receive a higher rate of pay. A scholarship program is available to employees who are interested in advancing their careers in health care. Continuing education programs are provided for licensed nurses.

If you are interested in working with the elderly and would like to give health care a try, please contact us for an interview. Call the Nursing Office on Monday - Friday from 7 am to 4 pm.

Milk has been routinely packaged in plastic bottles for twenty years with the approval of the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). Dr. John Bruhn, food scientist at the University of California, Davis, finds that milk sold in plastic containers is just as nutritious as ever. Today, the use of modern plastics has increased until 90 percent of all milk sold in gallons comes in plastic containers.

Assemblers

What Are You Doing Tuesday, August 6, After Work?

Evening Open House!
We're making it easy to discover Delta! Stop by Tuesday evening, August 6, to talk with one of our supervisors. Our doors will be open from 5:00 PM-8:00 PM to accommodate you. Or call 927-1060 to arrange a meeting that suits your schedule.

Delta Electronics, located in Beverly, is a fast-paced, fast-growing manufacturer of cable assemblies, microwave components, and RF connectors. If you want to work in a place where your experience will always be properly recognized and rewarded, join us now in one of the following highly visible positions.

We're looking for Assemblers at 2 experience levels:

Precision Mechanical Assemblers

If you have at least 5 years' experience (or slightly less if you're really good), and can work with limited supervision, you may be the right candidate to take responsibility for the assembly of small component parts. To qualify, you must be able to read blueprints and do work within critical dimensions. You must also have some hand-held soldering experience.

Assemblers

Duties same as above, but no blueprint experience needed. You must have at least 3 years' related experience.

Delta Electronics offers a competitive salary and benefits package, including health, life, dental insurance and educational reimbursement, in addition to an excellent 401(k) retirement plan.

If unable to join us on Tuesday, stop in any time between 8:00 AM and 4:00 PM to fill out an application at Delta Manufacturing Corp., 416 Cabot Street, Beverly, MA 01915.
